

DAGMARA KOWALSKA

Doctor's obligation to provide help and the criminal liability for its nonfeasance

The issue of criminal liability of doctors for failure to provide help to a person in need is described within the search for the source of this responsibility. The author concludes that providing medical aid is an obligation, and not a doctor's privilege. This standpoint is confirmed by the provisions of the Criminal Code.

Keywords: medical help, failure to provide medical help, criminal liability