Articles 191a, 200a and 200b of the Penal Code - critical analysis and proposals of amendments

The article describes interpretation problems regarding the articles: 191a, 200a and 200b of the Polish Penal Code which became a part of this Code in June 2010. Characteristics of crimes stipulated in these provisions are vague and stand in contrary to axiological presuppositions which apparently legislator had in mind while implementing these types of crimes (as they do not satisfy the rule of axiological rationality of the legislator, and they do not function properly in penal law system). All analyzed regulations should be amended so that they could protect these goods which should have been protected from the beginning of their implementation.
